IN a double-leaded editorial the Danville News skins us alive, says we have to borrow brains, are compelled to get assistance from outsiders in our editorial work and goodness knows how many other mean charges it makes. We "fess up" on all the charges and especially the one about borrowing brains. We got some from the News editors and in their spirit of liberality they left absolutely none for themselves, hence the belabored effusion in answer to a few criticisms made by this paper. Anent the necessity of outside assistance, it is only when we need flowery efforts, monuments built, political or war news that we feel constrained to ask the help of Brers. Embury and Richardson. They are adepts in these especial lines, the world knows it, and we unhesitatingly go to them when we need a Moses. We duly appreciate the compliment that we are known as a "brother to W. P. Walton." Would that the astute editors of the News had some brother or other relative who might perchance bring them out of obscurity that their readers might know who they are and from whence they came. No, no, gentle reader, we are no "bad man" nor are we a fighter, nor do we aspire to be such, but when compelled to lock horns with a fellow man we do not wait until the whole office force is around. Stanford's water works may be small but the water does not have to be doubly distilled before even a thirsty horse will drink it, as is the case with the Dix River product, nor do we drink pop made at Junction City because of bad water. "There is more business done in Danville in a day than in a week at Stanford," chirp the great editors as they smile at each other and wink their off eyes. Too much business is sometimes dangerous and the many failures in Little Britain and Boyle county may be as much due to too many irons in the fire as to the effort of certain comparatively poor people imitating their rich neighbors. THE INTERIOR JOURNAL is "dwarfed in mind" because it doesn't think Mr. Yerkes is the whole thing, is charged. When Mr. Yerkes took part in the famous Galt House caucus and later introduced Fugitive Taylor to the Philadelphia convention as a christian gentleman, the I. J. then and there dropped the kid glove statesman as it would a coal of fire. If the News wants to cling to its good republican friend and put him up as its "only only" after all this, it can do so, but what have its democratic readers to say about such a procedure?

THAT there are many ways to become famous the following will show: Miss Zelma Pilson, daughter of Mrs. B. F. Pilson, formerly of Louisville, is given the credit of starting the cheering at Portsmouth on receipt of the news of peace. Had Miss Pilson missed this opportunity the chances are that she would never have been heard of outside of her immediate neighborhood. But fortunately she did not miss it.

THE editor has been in jail. He was in the Pineville jail, and it was a real pleasure to be behind the bars.—Pineville Herald. As the above editor is about the worst republican pill in the box, and as he was so "deighted" to get behind the bars, we move that he be given the pleasure of incarceration until after the November election.

A ITEM is going the rounds that a woman who chased a mouse found $1,000 in the hole into which he ran. If by any stretch of imagination you can get to the point of believing that a woman ever chased a mouse, you can readily believe any other monstrous story connected with the escapade.

"JNO. D. ROCKEFELLER is said to get up at 5 o'clock every morning and take a walk in the dew barefooted," says a dispatch. But what of it? Nearly every man in Stanford who owns a cow does the same thing and nobody thinks anything of it.

If Christ should come to Rockcastle, how would he get over the county roads? asks the Mt. Vernon Signal. Give yourself no uneasiness on that proposition, Brer. Albright, the meek and lowly Nazarine is not bound in your direction.

THE Pittsburg Leader is booming Theodore Roosevelt for president in 1908. The paper insists that no declaration shall be accepted, and says: "His own will in the matter has ceased to have force." Teddy is all right now but many changes can and may come in three years and by nominating time he may be just the man the republicans do not want.

NICHOLAS county voters want a doctor for county judge. The democrats nominated Dr. N. H. McNamara and the rads have named Dr. John M. Wells, so its a doctor for that office whether you vote under the rooster or log cabin.

Eight deaths have been reported. A general cleansing of the county is in progress.

POLITICAL.

An effort is being made to have a conference of governors of Southern States at Chattanooga Nov. 1. Gov. Cox, of Tennessee, is the prime mover.

The Emperor of Japan has cabled his congratulations to President Roosevelt on the result of the Portsmouth conference. He says that the treaty is based on principles necessary for tranquility in the Far East.

Commissioner Greene, of the Federal Civil Service Commission, states that Democrats in the South, as a class, do not participate in the civil service examinations, and that this accounts for Southern States not receiving their quota of appointments.

For the first time in eight years, the Republicans of Fayette have placed a full county and city ticket in the field. The ticket is headed by M. L. Tribble, for county judge, with L. S. Yantis, for county attorney; James A. Todd, for sheriff; Wallace Cooper, for county assessor; James McConathy, for county clerk; K. G. Pulliam, for city representative; George S. Bateman, for county representative; James A. Barlow, for Police Judge. A full ticket for Councilmen, Aldermen and Board of Education was also named.

The INTERIOR JOURNAL extends in advance of the happy event its happy greetings and best wishes.

Rev. G. M. Moore, pastor of the First Colored Baptist church, has started a movement to mark the spot on Old Fort Hill, where the first settlement of the State was made. He will ask no one to contribute over one dollar. The shaft he proposes to erect will cost about $500, and he hopes to raise that amount by Christmas.—Harrodsburg Herald.

Dissent in Japan over the concessions granted to Russia in the peace conference is so deep that a revolution would not be surprising.

Mrs. Ann Jefferson, 86 years old, died suddenly at her home, near Mayville, while at the breakfast table.

There have been 2,058 cases of yellow fever in New Orleans and 291 deaths. The situation is improved.
